Dear Sirs,

I am strongly opposed to the settlement between the DOJ and Microsoft.

Microsoft should not be allowed to donate its own software to underprivileged schools. Microsoft's cost for assembling a CD-ROM with a few pages of advertising in a box is minimal.

They will give away a few hundred dollars worth of published software for each school, then claim that this represents thousands of dollars of donations.

Pennies on the dollar, I say.

You are screwing the public with this settlement.

Shame on you!
